Seaſonable ADMONITION to PHILADELPHIA.

Extract from a late Account of Holland.

THE old ſevere and frugal Way of Living, is now almoſt quite out of Date in Holland; there is very little to be ſeen of that ſober Modeſty in Apparel, Diet, and Habitations as formerly. Inſtead of convenient Dwellings, the Hollanders now build ſtately Palaces, have their delightful Gardens and Houſes of Pleaſure, keep Coaches and Sleas, and have very rich Furniture for their Horſes, with Trappings adorned with Silver-Bells. I have ſeen the Vanity of a Vintner's Son, who had the Boſſes of the Bit and Trappings of his Horſe of pure Silver, his Footman and Coachman having Silver fringed Gloves. Nay, ſo much is the Humour of the Women altered, and of their Children alſo, that no Apparel can now ſerve them, but the beſt and richeſt that France and other Countries affords, and their Sons are ſo addicted to Gaming, that many Families in Amſterdam are ruined by it; not that England is leſs extravagant than the Dutch, who as I ſaid before got ſuch great Eſtates by their Frugality, whilſt they were not addicted to ſuch Prodigality and Wantonneſs, as the Engliſh are, whoſe Exceſs I cannot excuſe. Nevertheleſs, the grave and ſober People of Holland are very ſenſible of the great Alteration that now is in their Country, and, as they ſay Paracelſus uſed to cure his Patients of their Diſeaſe with a full Belly; ſo a good Burgermaſter, deſirous to convince his Amſterdammers of their diſſolute kind of Life, invited the thirty-ſix Magiſtrates and their Wives to a Feaſt, who being come, and the Ladies big with Expectation of ſome rare and extraordinary Entertainment, ſat down at Table, where the firſt Courſe was Buttermilk boiled with Apples, Stock-fiſh, buttered Turneps and Carrots, Lettice-Sallet and Red Herrings, and only ſmall Beer without any Wine: At this the Ladies ſtartled, and began to whiſper to their Husbands that they expected no ſuch Entertainment; but upon removing the Diſhes and Plates, they found underneath printed Verſes, importing, That after that Manner of Living they began to thrive and enlarged their City.

The ſecond Courſe conſiſted of Bocke de Kooks, Quarters of Lamb, roaſted Rabbits, and a Sort of Pudding they call a Brother; here they had Dort and Engliſh Beer, with French Wine, yet all this did not pleaſe the dainty Dames; but upon removing away the Plates, another Diſh of Poetry appeared, which acquainted them, That after that modeſt and ſober Way of Living, they might keep what they had got, and lay up ſomething for their Children.

The third Courſe was made up of the Rarities of the Seaſon, as Patridges, Pheaſants, and all Sorts of Fowl, and Engliſh Paſties, with Plenty of Rheniſh and other Sorts of Wine, to moiſten them; this put the Ladies in a frolick and jolly Humour, but under their Plates was found the Uſe and Application in Verſes, telling them, That to feed after that Manner was voluptuous and luxurious, and would impair their Health, and waſte their Eſtates, make them neglect their Trade, and ſo in time reduce their ſtately and new-built flouriſhing City, to their old fiſhing Town again. After this was brought in a Banquet of all ſorts of Sweetmeats, piled up in Pyramids, and delicate Fruit, with Plenty of delicious Wines; and to conclude all, a Set of Muſick and Maſquers, who danced with the young Ladies: But at parting, like the Hand-writing to Belſhazzar upon the Wall, every one had a printed Paper of Moralities put into their Hands, ſhewing them the Cauſes of the Ruin of the Roman Common-wealth, according to that of the Poet, with an excellent Advice to them, that if they did not quit the Buffooneries and apiſh Modes of the French, and return to the Simplicity, Plainneſs and Modeſty of their Anceſtors and Founders,

Nullum crimen abeſt, facinuſque libidinis, ex quo

Founders, their Common-wealth could not long laſt: But all the Thanks the good old Burgermaſter had for his kind and chargeable Entertainment in thus feaſting his Countrymen, was to be flouted at and paſquined. The Sparks of Amſterdam ſaying in all Places, that the old Man, being now paſt the Years of Pleaſure himſelf, would have none others to take theirs.

London, March 30.

The Preamble to the Bill for the Naturalization of the Prince of Orange, is as follows:

WHEREAS the King's moſt excellent Majeſty (whom God long preſerve) hath been pleaſed, to the univerſal Joy and Satisfaction of his People, and for the better ſtrengthening of the Proteſtant Intereſt in Europe, to give his eldeſt Daughter the Princeſs Royal, poſſeſſing the moſt exalted Virtues, and adorned with all poſſible Accompliſhments, in Marriage to his moſt Serene Highneſs William Charles-Henry Friſo, Prince of Orange and Naſſau, deſcended from that illuſtrious Houſe, to which this Kingdom owes its Preſervation from Popery and Slavery, effected by their glorious Deliverer King William the Third, to whoſe Memory this Nation will always expreſs the utmoſt Gratitude for the many Bleſſings they enjoy, particularly for the happy Settlement of the Crown upon the preſent Royal Family; And whereas a more grateful Proof of the Eſteem and Affection of this Nation cannot be given to the Heir of that illuſtrious Family, and the Inheritor of its Virtues, than by an Act of Naturalization, to make him capable of enjoying thoſe Rights and Liberties which their great Deliverer ſo happily reſcued and ſecured: We, &c.

Extract of a Letter from Dantzick, April 20.

All the Advantage the Ruſſians have gained over us hitherto, is only the taking of Holm, and ſome Forts or Redoubts which we thought fit to abandon, partly becauſe of their Diſtance, and partly for the ſake of not weakning our Garriſon; and for the ſame Reaſons 'tis believed that 800 Men poſted in ſome ſmall Forts on the Viſtula, will be withdrawn from thence. It is true that the Ruſſians have puſhed their Approaches very near our Outworks; but inaſmuch as they have yet no heavy Artillery, there is little or no Appearance of their taking the Place. It is very remarkable, that tho' the Enemy have for eight Days ſucceſſively, thrown a great Number of red-hot Bullets into the Place, they have had but very little Effect, and that only one young Man was killed. All the Menaces of General Munich have ſerved hitherto only to animate more and more the Burghers to defend the Place, and to ſuſtain even a Bombardment till the Arrival of Succours, which the Marquis Monti aſſures us are coming by Sea from France, and will ſoon be here. The Love of Liberty, and Fear of being oblig'd to receive a foreign Garriſon, and the Veneration which the People here have for King Staniſlaus, contributes much to this Firmneſs of Reſolution; but in Caſe the Succours arrive not by the Beginning of May, and the Ruſſians receive their heavy Artillery, the Magiſtrates will find themſelves obliged for avoiding the Ruin of the City, to enter into a Negotiation with the Count Munich, by the King of Pruſſia's Mediation. 'Tis aſſured that the Magiſtrates having inſinuated this to the King, his Majeſty received that Declaration very graciouſly, but aſſured them that the Succours expected will arrive in Time. All now depends on the Diligence of the French Squadron, and whether it will arrive or not before the Ruſſian heavy Artillery, and the Reinforcement of Saxon Troops which are marching to join the Enemy.

The Communication with Weyſelmonde is ſtill preſerved by Means of our Forts on the Viſtula, and the Praames, or flat-bottom'd Boats, which, while they cannonade the Enemy's Redoubts, facilitate the Veſſels coming from Weyſelmonde to paſs by, and by the ſame Means, a Swediſh Veſſel with 50 Recruits on board, has ſafely enter'd the Port; and beſides this Shallops frequently arrive with Proviſions and Couriers; but it is true, this is not done without Danger, and the Hazard of the Enemy's Cannon and Musketry.

As we are entirely blocked up by Land, the Magiſtrates have ſhut up the City Gates, and forbid any Perſon whatſoever going out without Leave in writing from the Preſident of War. An Engliſh Ship is alſo arrived here coming from Liebau, the Maſter whereof reports, that at his Departure, he ſaw two Ruſſian Fregates ready to put to Sea, laden with Artillery and Ammunition. 'Tis remarked that the Enemy have begun to defile the greateſt part of their Troops towards the Sea-Coaſt, apparently to oppoſe any Deſcent by the French. We flatter ourſelves of receiving a large Succour from Sweden. We are told that the Ruſſians are fortifying Foling to retire thither in Caſe of need, and that Count Tarlow has defeated General Biron: but other Advices mention, that the ſaid Count only follows the Saxon Troops, in order to harraſs them in their March.

Copenhagen, April 27. Six French Tranſport Ships, convoy'd by a Frigate of 24 Guns, are arrived in our Road, with 600 Men on board; and the Officers who come hither give out that the Fleet conſiſts of above 60 Sail, which was ſeparated by a great Storm; but as the Wind has been fair for them above 8 Days, and no more of them appear, we cannot tell what to believe.

Berlin, April 27. We learn from Dreſden, that upon the Arrival of a Courier from Vienna, King Auguſtus had ordered 10,000 Militia of Turinge and Voightland to march towards Plawen, which makes it believed that they are to be joined near Egra by ſome Imperial Troops, to go upon ſome great Deſign.

Paris,

Paris, May 7. 'Tis adviſed from Strasburgh, That in the Night between the 29th and 30th paſt, the Army of Marſhal Berwick, to the Number of 50000 Men, had begun to paſs the Rhine; and 'twas not doubted would immediately attack the Enemies Lines, before they are ſtronger fortified.

From Cremona, That our Troops were ſtill quiet in their Quarters; and that they had learnt by Deſerters that the Enemy's Army in the Mantuan, which was about 35, 000 Men, was conſiderably diminiſhed as well by Sickneſs as Deſertion.

London, May 3. On Tueſday the 30th of April laſt, came on the Election of Members for the City of London, when Sir John Barnard, Humphry Parſons, Eſq; John Barber, Eſq; and Robert Godſchal, Eſq; appearing to have the Majority of Hands in the Common Hall, were declared; but a Poll being demanded by the Friends of Micajah Perry, and Robert Willimott, Eſqrs; the ſame was granted, and began the next Morning at nine of the clock.

Rhode-Iſland, July 5. We hear from Tiverton, That a Negro Man belonging to Col. Job Almy, being at Work amongſt the Hay, died with the Heat of the Weather: And likewiſe a young Woman, the Wife of Robert Barker, being brought to Bed 10 Days ſince, died laſt Night, ſuppos'd to be by the Heat of the Seaſon, the like of which has never been known here before.

Boſton, July 8. It appears by a Liſt in the London Magazine for April laſt, that there were near an hundred Gentlemen choſen in that Month to ſerve in the new Parliament, which was to meet ſome Time in this Month for the Diſpatch of Buſineſs. It alſo appears by the ſaid Liſt, that there is a conſiderable Majority on the Court Side.

Died yeſterday Mrs. Beard, lately brought to Bed, her Death owing, as is ſuppoſed, to the late exceſſive Heat.

For 3 or 4 Days paſt we have had exceſſive hot Weather particularly on Thurſday and Saturday laſt, the Southern & Weſtern Mails cou'd not get in to Town till 12 a Clock in the Night, and as much as their Horſes were able to perform. A Perſon coming part of the way with Mr. John Thomas the Weſtern Rider, loſt his Horſe by the Heat, in about 6 Miles Riding; and we have it reported, that 2 or 3 Negroes in Boſton & Charleſtown have loſt their Lives thereby: And are afraid of hearing many more Accidents of the like Nature.

Philadelphia, July 18.

On Sunday the 7th Inſt. a Thunder Clap in a Guſt ſtruck a Barn at Whitemarſh; the Flaſh fell upon a Mow of Rye between two Girls that were at Play on it, and immediately blazed up ſo violently that they were obliged to quit the Place, and the Barn was burnt down, but neither of the Girls hurt.

By all Accounts from the Country it appears that this Harveſt, by Reaſon of the extream Heat, has been one of the hardeſt for the Workmen to go thro', that has ever been known here. Beſides thoſe mentioned in our laſt, a Man who was tending Reapers, died with the Heat at Cheſter, and ſeveral others we have heard of in diſtant Places, of whoſe Death we have not the particulars.
